CONTENTS OF THE ACHS STUDENT HANDBOOK

At the request of Mr. Don Armentrout, Principal at Appomattox County High School, we have been re-printing the contents of the ACHS Student Handbook as space permits.

Following is more information from the handbook that should be of interest to parents and citizens of this county:

Early Dismissal

If you need to leave school prior to the end of the school day:

1 - Bring a signed note from your parent or guardian stating the reason for the early dismissal, and how you will be leaving, time to leave, etc.

2 - Give the note to the attendance officers in the cafeteria (8:15 - 8:45).

3 - If the reason is a valid one, the attendance officer will give you an early dismissal slip which means you can leave at the specified time).

4 - Show the slip to your teacher and "sign out" at the office just before you leave.

5 - If you return to school before the school day has ended, come by the office and "sign in".

6 - When you return, the next day, present your early dismissal slip to the teachers whose classes you missed. To be officially excused for having left early we ask that your parent or guardian, sometime during the day, call the school to verify the early dismissal. If toward the end of the day we have not heard from your parents, we will contact them. If we cannot verify the early dismissal by phone or in person, your absence will be unexcused

Leaving School Grounds

Students are not permitted to leave the school grounds during school hours unless granted permission by the principal or assistant principal.

Late Arrival To School

If you arrive at school after 9:00 you should report directly to the main office for an admit slip.

Lockers

Each student will be issued a locker by the homeroom teacher in which to keep his or her personal belongings. It is your responsibility to keep the locker locked at all times and please keep them clean and attractive. We suggest you not give your combination to other students - it could cause problems. Finally, if you have locker problems, contact the main office.

The School Board has given the principal or his designee, the authority to search a student's locker or desk, if there is reason to suspect the presence of articles or materials injurious to the best interest of the school. (Examples: drugs, drug materials and equipment, knives, etc.)

Appomattox Is Still Friendly Little Village

(The following news article was written by Frank Starr, Knight News Wire, and was printed in the October 6, 1976 edition of the STATE-ITEM, New Orleans, La. A couple from New Orleans recently stopped by Jeanne's Steak House, having read the article, just for a friendly visit. Jeanne passed a copy of the news article onto the TIMES-VIRGINIANand we thought it would be of interest....other articles by Frank Starr are available and we hope to reprint them at a later date.)

APPOMATTOX, Va. - Red clay country. Smell the pine woods. Welcome - historic Appomattox County - where our nation reunited."

It was just that they had retreated this far, those exhausted and starving Confederate soldiers under Gen. Robert E. Lee, when the federal troops blocked their escape route, captured their supply trains, and confronted them with a line of infantry on Palm Sunday morning. So, concluded Lee, "There is nothing left for me to do but to go and see Gen. Grant, and I would rather die a thousand deaths."

But there was a spirit of reuniting. After the hour-long meeting, Union artillerymen started a 100-gun salute in celebration, but Grant ordered it stopped. The terms had been generous. Rebel soldiers had been allowed to keep their horses and mules and go home; officers kept their side arms.

The town has moved three miles away from its 1865 site since then, to gather around the railroad station, now an arts and crafts center. Across the street is Jeanne Stanley's restaurant, where are served charcoaled steaks, hospitality and cheerful tales about her last vacation to Thailand and Japan.

On the edge of town a new furniture plant is paying passing good wages, along with the Appomattox Garment Co. and the gas pipeline pumping station.

Appomattox is still a friendly little country village that can hardly be called industrialized, but on its own terms it has a newly industrial life.

"It has been", says Calvin Robinson, Appomattox historian and enthusiast,"an inducement for our brightest and most promising young people to stay here rather than migrate to the cities.

It has brought good jobs, a better living standard, nicer homes, and development away from our former dependence on one cash crop such as darklea tobacco".

When school integration came a few years back, says Janet Noble, who came here from Massachusetts with her husband eight years ago, Appomattox had it the easiest of any town around here. "It went through like duck soup," she says.

A single incident occurred when the school board removed the name of the formerly black school, Carver-Price. A protest was organized. The sheriff, a young fellow named Gene Richardson, looked over the crowd, pointed his finger and said, "You, you, and you - out of town." With the strangers gone, the problem was settled in short order, and Appomattox was smoothly integrated.

Not so in Farmville, 30 miles down the road. There, white parents, like those in many parts of the South, now send their children to private schools at great expense to themselves, leaving the public school all black.

In nearby Evergreen, Zack Cheatham still gives a big satin horeshow ribbon from his fading collection to the kids who come to see him. In his time he knew more folks and had more admirers than anyone else in Appomattox County.

And he brought the county a share of fame. He is the only man in local memory to have won six consecutive state championships in roadster class horse shows. Until he suffered a stroke in 1971 at 75, he was still driving roadsters in races and trading horses as he had for 50 years.

Back in the Truman administration, the National Park Service restored the old town of Appomattox Court House as a national historic site. It was a big event, attended by Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 3rd, Robert E. Lee 4th and about 50,000 other folks.

Nothing much bigger has happened in Appomattox since.

SAFE PRACTICES

You can help keep your family somewhat safer from fire if you all plan and practice escape routes. These rules for home fire drills and fire prevention come from The Hartford Insurance Group, sponsors of the Junior Fire Marshal program.

1. Make a home escape plan, decide on primary and secondary exits from each room in the house.

2. Practice your home escape plan often, especially if you have children.

3. Install a smoke detector. It can give you vital extra minutes in case of fire. For printed information about smoke detectors, write to the Public Information Office, National Fire Prevention and Control Administration, Department of Commerce, Washington,
